

05.10.2017

Grohe Dialogue 2017: Christoph Ingenhoven and Patrick Schumacher discuss architecture in the age of digital representation

Date

05.10.2017

Links

Grohe Dialogue Series 2017

GROHE dialogue series 2017

Convergence of Analogue and Digital - Architecture in the Age of Digital Representation

Thursday, 19 October 2017, 7 pm

Banking Hall, Central London

Christoph Ingenhoven and Patrick Schumacher, Zaha Hadid Architects, London, present their visions:

Digitisation is transforming all industries. Analogue and digital spaces merge, and with them the relation between human, machine and space. The realm of architecture is changing dramatically too. This development will have a tremendous impact on how buildings will be designed and used. Architecture as a whole will need to reinvent itself. Who - or what - will design and build a house in 30 years? Are increasingly digital and production processes a chance for architects to head in a new direction?

As part of our GROHE trends these typologies dialogues, Christoph

Ingenhoven and Patrick Schumacher will give answers to the issues that concern all of us!

Access to this event after previous registration only.

Photo: Jim Rakete