Christoph Ingenhoven will be at Architects, not Architecture on November 15 with Richard Rogers and Carme Pinós.

Thanks to its refreshing concept, the series of events launched in Hamburg in 2015 is now internationally successful. The initiator and presenter Fermín Tribaldos usually welcomes three guests - well-known and award-winning architects - who can not say a word about their projects. Rather, they report on your career, drastic experiences and formative experiences. The knowledge of the people behind the world-famous buildings opens up new perspectives and offers personal inspiration. The open and cordial mood encourages visitors to network and exchange.

Christoph Ingenhoven is one of the leading international architects committed to sustainable architecture. Ecologically and economically responsible handling of resources is at the core of his designs. This quality has been confirmed through the achievement of the highest certifications according to international standards including LEED, Swiss Minergy Standard, BREEAM and DGNB.

Christoph Ingenhoven is a founding member of Architecture Societies and Federations including but not limited to the German Society for Sustainable Building (DGNB) and the Federal Foundation for Building Culture. Furthermore he is a member of the North-Rhine Westphalia Academy of Sciences and Arts.

Thanks to the success of earlier events of the series, "Architects, not Architecture." is very popular. For this reason, early registration is advisable.
