Marina One, Singapore

Singapore's new landmark in the Central Business District (CBD) has recently topped out and will be completed at the beginning of next year. The project located in one of the world's most densely populated cities is designed according to supergreen®-principles. The high-rise, mixed-use building will resemble a green mountain in the middle of Singapore's CBD. Its green, public space is the center of the project and will be the largest public plaza in the CBD. Multiple levels of the central garden add up to 125% of the site area. Marina One comprises two office towers including one of the largest trading floors in the world, two residential towers and a retail podium set around lush greenery. It is a role-model for sustainable building in tropical and subtropical megacities.
